An abstract watercolor splash on a light background. The splash is composed of numerous overlapping circles and irregular shapes in various colors including blue, yellow, orange, red, purple, and green. The colors are more concentrated in the center and fade out towards the edges.

Eastern Nazarene College Vol. 94.5

Dear Graduates,

I wondered if I was making a good choice. We packed and unpacked book boxes in 13 houses in different states up and down the eastern coast before we unpacked our yearbooks back here on campus. Several times I questioned the wisdom of carting large heavy books on another move. Over the years I have come to realize the true value of a yearbook is not the price paid for the paper and printing nor is it the weight fee charged by movers. The value of a yearbook is in the memories it holds and its ability to transport us in our mind back to a special place and time. Remember that great game! Oh how I loved that silly hairdo! What fun we had in the cafeteria that day! Remember the big snow storm! I've thought about the wise words of certain professors and the life lessons from faculty and staff as I see their faces in our yearbooks. I'm motivated to pick up the phone or send a note to keep in touch with dear friends as I am reminded of our younger selves and the experiences we shared. Add your own notes to your yearbook. Personalize it. Make it a reflection of your own ENC experience. A yearbook is treasure worth packing and unpacking for the memories it holds and the relationships that continue for the rest of your life.

Dear Class of 2016,

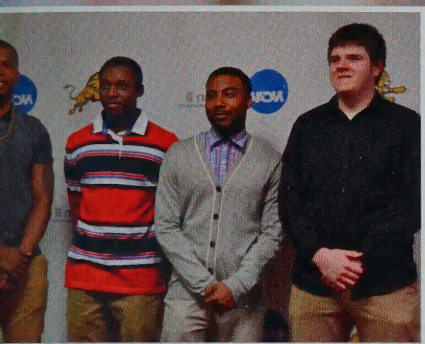

Over my four (and a half) years at ENC, I often found myself walking away from the semesters in December or May feeling exhausted, wrecked from the stress and chaos that school presents. Drowning in finals and papers, we can so easily forget all the times we laughed and played and sang, worshiped and loved and grew. The Nautilus acts as our gentle reminder that the sleepless nights and long exams were worth it. That between the grades and lectures we managed to see the fall musical and hear an A Capella concert. We watched our roommates and classmates compete in Nazy Idol and we made time for a few snacks at Late Night. And, luckily, the Nautilus never lets us forget the time we dressed up in our most embarrassing outfits for the Lions' Den and performed our most outrageous talent for Mr. & Ms. ENC. As a body, we are so good at getting involved in various clubs, sports, and arts, and supporting each other in the process, but sometimes we need to be reminded of that. As a student, and now as an alum, when I find myself wondering why I put myself through all the different types of stress, the Nautilus brings me back to the bleachers, theater, chapel, and cafe, and I know it was worth it.

Love,

Robin Dean, Class President of 2016

Why Remix 2016?

Dear Alumni,

The Nautilus is more than a collection of pictures to be stored on a bookshelf and dusted off every 5 years when reunions are celebrated at Homecoming. Yearbooks are filled with memories of friendships formed and the growth that occurs between New Student Orientation and Commencement. While camera phones have made it easier to take pictures, oftentimes we forget to capture the moments that matter the most. While individual students take pictures of food in the cafeteria, trees around campus and specific friend groups, the yearbook staff take pictures of the entire student body. While students have easy access through social media to pictures taken by friends, it becomes harder to find those pictures when students leave campus to pursue jobs around the world. Yearbooks become treasured possessions to remember the people who shaped our future and the events that enhanced our education. Just as alumni from the 50s and 60s look back at the black and white pictures of King's Tournament, milkshakes in the dugout and quartets, alumni from 2016 and 2017 will look back at the filtered pictures of Lip Sync, coffee at Hebrews and frisbee on the front lawn. The history of student events, organizations, athletics and theater are most easily tracked through the Nautilus.

The Nautilus is an investment to ensure the preservation of memories. It tells a story of the entire campus, and the voices of many students are needed to complete that story. When alumni gather for events, they fondly look at yearbooks and each picture triggers a memory. The adventure of walking into a dorm room for the first time, the stress of taking a first exam, the excitement of trying out for a chapel team, the joy of being accepted into the first theater production, and the sense of accomplishment when walking across the stage of graduation. The future of ENC relies on the lessons learned from history and the Nautilus captures the moments that should never be forgotten.

On behalf of Eastern Nazarene College's 2016 senior class, Nautilus is dedicating Remix to Professor Montague R. Williams. This is due to his overwhelming care, connection, and love for his family, students, and the greater student body.

Through Montague's, and his wife Jennie's, undying support and dedication to our community we cannot begin to explain the impact they have had on our campus. Since he accepted our college's chaplaincy we know Montague will have a continued and lasting impact on the lives of ENC students for many years to come.

Whether speaking from the pulpit or lecturing in classes, using his new-born daughter as a teaching tool or a lion king reenactment, several of this year's graduates have expressed their memorable experiences with Montague. As senior Julianna Cameron reminisced, "Montague is one of those professors who asks the kind of questions that make you think, and he's not afraid to do so. He invests himself into the lives of his students."

Rev. Williams holds an B.A. and M.A. in Religion from Olivet Nazarene University and a Masters of Divinity from Nazarene Theological Seminary. He joined the ENC family in 2009 as a speaker and adjunct professor before joining the college's tenure-track faculty in 2012. Under his leadership, the division has created a new major in Intercultural Studies and Missions and, with his wife, has led numerous Fusion spring break missions trips for the college. Future "Dr. Williams" is currently completing a Ph.D. in Theological Studies at Boston University.

We thank you for your service to our community and dedicate this collection of memories to you, Jennie, and your precious daughter Sophia!

"He is so cool, loves God, is so easy to get along with, and he is a fun person to be around."

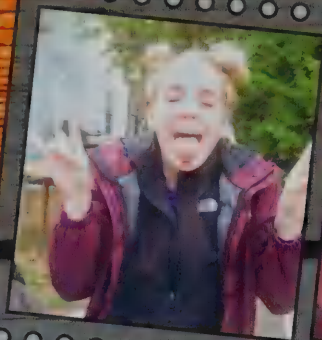

- Jameson Giamo

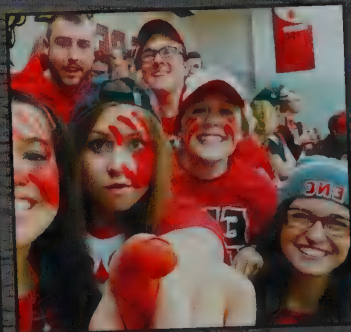

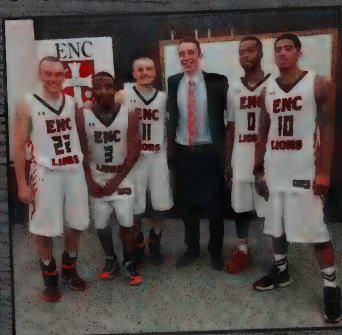

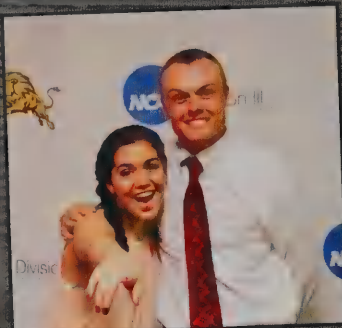

"He made my experience in Christian Tradition somehow bearable, and he is always trying to meet the needs of all the students on campus."

- Alec Daniel
